TAKING NO CHANCES.

The Old Gentleman Had Been There Before and Was Easy.

The old gentleman had been rather gruff when the young man entered and his manner had not been particularly inviting while the young man was shifting from one foot to another and preparing to state his business. He simply said, "Well?" in an inquiring tone when the young man announced that he had come to see him on a matter of vast importance, but there was a great change when the young man said, "Your daughter?"

"My what?" interrupted the old gentleman with sudden animation.

"Your daughter," repeated the young man, and then he added, as a horrible suspicion crossed his mind, "She is yours, isn't she?"

"Of course she's mine," retorted the old gentleman. "She hasn't fallen off her bicycle and hurt herself, has she?"

"Oh, no. She?"

"And she hasn't run over any children or eloped with the coachman, or—"

"Nothing of that sort at all," answered the young man, becoming a trifle more courageous. "You see, she sent me here to ask you?"

"She sent you?"

"Yes, she—well, of course it was my suggestion first—but she said to ask you?"

The old gentleman seemed to be fully alive to the situation now. He stopped the young man by a gesture, and then he got up and shut and locked the door.

"What's the matter?" asked the young man with some agitation. "Was any one listening?"

"Not that I know of, but I am taking no chances."

"Ah, from past experiences you are inclined to suspect?"

"Well, yes, I am, to be real frank with you," returned the old gentleman.

"Now, go ahead."

"But I should think you could end it all by laying a trap," suggested the young man, ignoring the request of the elder to proceed.

"That's what I've done," was the reply. "Now, go on."

"Ah, servants are such?"

"Servants! Who said anything about servants?" roared the old gentleman.

"The last fellow who came in here to ask me for Mary weakened before he got half through and bolted, and I don't propose to take any chances this time. Now, go ahead."

Of course, under the circumstances, there was little difficulty in reaching a conclusion that was satisfactory—temporarily, at least.—Chicago Post.

He Knew What He Was About.

Among the stories told to the deserved credit of such lawyers as have no scruples against distorting and concealing the truth in order to shield persons whom they know or have every reason to believe to be guilty the following is entitled to a good place:

An attorney had occasion to defend a man who was justly accused of counterfeiting paper money, and he manipulated the case with such skill that he secured the acquittal of the prisoner.

When the lawyer and his client were alone together again, the counterfeiter overwhelmed the lawyer with thanks.

"And now?" said he, putting his hand in his pocket.

"And now," the lawyer took up the sentence, "I will have my fee, and I will take it in hard currency, not in bills, if you please."—Youth's Companion.

A Simple White Soup.

Three large potatoes, 2 turnips, a parsnip and 2 white onions, all to be boiled together until tender enough to rub through a colander. To the puree obtained from these add a seasoning of pepper, celery salt and pinch of mace, a teaspoonful of fine white bread crumbs and 1 1/2 pints of boiling milk. Stir over the fire until this boils, and, if too thick, add a little boiling water.

Veal Balls.

Two ounces of beef suet, 2 ounces of veal, the yolks of a raw and a boiled egg, a small onion, pepper, salt, mace, nutmeg and lemon peel to the taste. Beat them all well together. Fry and serve in gravy.

Information for Tourists.

A passenger by the last Colonial steamer was met on the dock by a Milesian American friend, who resides in Honolulu. As the pair waited to have the newcomer's gripsack scrawled over with chalk marks by the Customs Inspector at the gate the stranger remarked to his friend "Do you 'ave much rain 'ere?" RAINIER me boy, gallons of it, just come up to the Anchor Saloon where they keep it always, clear and cool. We'll just be in time for lunch too and that's the only place in town where they serve it up in proper style with a glass of RAINIER BEER to equilibrialize the solids—They went!
